

Premium First-Semester Support

What families receive for $3850 when a student needs more personalized support during the college transition

This premium level is designed for students who need more than the standard first-semester package can provide. It adds tighter accountability, more personalized intervention, and stronger guidance when first-semester challenges begin to snowball.

What's Included	What This Means for Your Student	Why It Matters for Parents
Higher-Frequency Student Check-Ins	Your student meets with me more often so I can monitor follow-through, address problems sooner, and keep the recovery plan moving.	This creates a tighter support loop when a student needs more accountability than a standard package provides.
Personalized Intervention Plan	I build a more customized action plan based on your student's actual breakdown points, such as missed assignments, weak study habits, writing bottlenecks, poor time management, or inconsistent class engagement.	Parents get support tailored to the real problem instead of relying on generic advice.
Tighter Accountability and Follow-Through Support	I provide more active check-ins around deadlines, workload, and next steps so the student is less likely to slip back into avoidance.	This is especially valuable when good intentions are not translating into action.
Academic Performance Triage	I help identify which classes, assignments, or academic behaviors are creating the most immediate risk and prioritize the right responses first.	Not every problem can be solved at once. This helps your family focus energy where it matters most.
Writing and Long-Project Intervention	If papers, major assignments, or writing-heavy courses are creating significant stress, I help your student break the work down and develop a more realistic completion strategy.	This prevents large, intimidating assignments from continuing to derail confidence and grades.
Professor and Campus Communication Coaching	I coach your student on how to communicate more effectively with professors, advisors, and support staff when they need clarification, extensions, or guidance.	Many students stay stuck because they avoid uncomfortable conversations until the situation worsens.
Campus Resource Connection and Escalation Guidance	I help your student identify the right campus supports and encourage follow-through with tutoring, writing support, advising, disability services, counseling, or other resources when needed.	A key part of premium support is making sure your student does not try to solve bigger problems alone.

Parent Updates with Clear Boundaries	Parents receive clearer insight into how the plan is going while still preserving the student's ownership of the work.	You stay informed without becoming the daily manager of every academic issue.
Early Detection of Deeper Concerns	Because I already know what first-year struggles often look like, I can spot when the issue appears to go beyond routine academic adjustment.	This helps families move faster when a student may need a different kind of support than coaching alone.
Priority Access When the Semester Starts to Slip	Your student receives a more responsive level of support during periods when grades, routines, or engagement begin to slide.	This gives your family another layer of protection before a wobble turns into probation, withdrawal, or wasted tuition dollars.
